Located in Auburn Village, the Geelong Polo Club was established in 1888 as the Auburn Hotel. A century later, the venue underwent renovations and adopted its current name, the Geelong Polo Club. The Geelong has long been regarded as one of Melbourne's most iconic venues and many colourful licensees have owned or operated this grand old dame including the late John Coleman who, to this day, is still considered to be an AFL legend.

Operating over two levels, the Geelong has an area for all occasions. The ground floor operates as the main bar, lounge, 100 seat dining room and dance / entertainment area. Outside there is a beer garden with a retractable roof which also seats 100. The first floor contains function rooms of various sizes to cater for all occasions.
